Environmental Health Specialist (In Training or Registered)

Knox Public Health is seeking a full-time Environmental Health Specialist (either In Training or Registered) to join our Environmental Health division. As part of our team, you will play a key role in safeguarding public health in our rural community by conducting environmental health inspections and investigations across a variety of public and private facilities. These may include food safety assessments, private water system evaluations, household sewage treatment system inspections, and more.

The position also involves routine environmental health sampling to assess compliance with sanitary standards, preparing detailed inspection reports, and maintaining thorough records of all investigations. Our rural community presents unique challenges and opportunities for public health work, providing a rewarding environment for professionals passionate about making a difference.

If you are committed to ensuring a safe and healthy environment for our residents and have a strong attention to detail, we encourage you to apply!

Applicant MUST be an Environmental Health Specialist in Training or Registered Environmental Health Specialist, or meet the requirements of the State of Ohio Sanitarian Registration Board to become an Environmental Health Specialist in Training or Registered Environmental Health Specialist. Registration eligibilities can be found at the following link:
